April 2024

Change is in the air!

You've probably noticed that markets have been on the rise since last November, hitting record highs. This suggests an imminent decline.

A healthy stock market cycle is made up of ups and downs. What's important is to stay invested and stay focused on our goals. It's good to remember that the market goes up a lot more often than it goes down.

I don't think we're on the cusp of a correction (although that's possible). In my opinion, we are at the beginning of a change of direction with respect to some stocks. For several months now, the companies that have been leading the way have been those of the "Magnificent 7" (see financial letter of January 2024) and I believe that they will give up their places to the benefit of other companies.

Since the beginning of the year, the market has been increasingly supported by industrials, energy and materials stocks. As a result, we have increased our position in these sectors and decreased our position in technology.

Note that we have 6.6% of our assets in cash, which will allow us to take advantage of a market decline if it occurs of course.

Have a great spring

Phil
